

The Theology of Sin vs Sins

Sometimes we use the words “sin” and “sins” to mean the same thing. And yet, “sin” and “sins” mean two different things.

You could define “sin” as the basic source for all of the bad things that we do (“sins”). The Lutheran understanding of sin is that when we are born, we are born with a basic human selfishness and rebelliousness towards God. That sin, or brokenness, is encoded in our very DNA as humans.

The apostle Paul calls it “the flesh” - the part of us that is anchored in the brokenness of this world. All of our individual sins develop out of that basic selfishness and desire to have our own way. And so, we have all of the individual sins of greed, lust, envy, pride, hate, slander of our neighbor, despair and every other sin(s) that you can imagine.

Sometimes a person does not feel very sinful. In fact, they might feel like they do not really sin at all since they have not killed anyone or directly stolen anything from anyone. And yet, that very basic sin is a part of every human being.

For instance, each of us generally wants to get the cheapest price for any product that you might buy. That feeling is the individual sin called “greed”. It is the product of our basic selfishness or sin.

Now, you might assume that expecting the cheapest price for a product is “fair”. And yet, we often get products at such low prices because the initial laborers are not paid fairly. This would be called the sin of “injustice”. It is also a product of our basic sin.

But since other middlemen create the system where the laborer does not get fairly paid, you and I do not see this injustice directly. The larger economic system that we live in and support creates the injustice. But you and I are an integral part of this system. It is our system and so, we are tainted or collaterally sinful as a result.

This is why the church supports such things as a “Fair Trade” coffee and chocolate. These products are more expensive because the laborers are more fairly paid. But they do not begin to cover the abundance of unfairly paid products - like the bananas we eat every day.

Another reason that many of our products are so cheap is because we out-source the environmental damage that manufacturing these products produce. For instance, our blue jeans are made in Mexico because it would be too expensive to obey the environmental laws that keep America clean. The same is true for all of our plastic toys and cups and bowls, etc.

And then, of course, there are the various direct sins like hate, and anger, and deception which is also called lying. And stealing does not have to come from a store, it happens every time you download a song that someone else bought (or didn't buy).

The bottom line is that each of us is steeped in sin - and we all commit various sins daily - even if you really would rather not do these things. It is very important that we recognize our sinfulness. While it may make you feel guilty at first - the intention is to make you feel thankful to God that Jesus has forgiven all of your sin (and sins). So that you are fully a part of God's love and joy and eternal life. Living in that continual forgiveness is called grace. Living in God's grace.

There is a very important scene and parable that Jesus tells on this point - Luke 7:36-50. (You should stop reading this article and read that parable for deeper understanding.) Those who know they are forgiven much live in joy and thanksgiving every day.

- Pastor Steve

SPIRITUAL HABITS OF HEALTH As part of our 175th Anniversary Celebration of St. Bartholomew’s, we will be exploring a variety of spiritual disciplines that can enhance our physical, emotional and spiritual health. While spiritual disciplines are not required as “good works” for our salvation they can be better viewed as exercises for the mind and body through worship, Word, prayer, and community. Each workshop will explore various ways to stretch our spiritual muscles. We will be diving deeper into Simplicity, Fasting, Meditation, Lectio Divina, Prayer, Silence, Solitude, Personal Reflection and Christian Yoga as a spiritual discipline. Join us for one or each of the six workshops throughout the year that will help build spiritual habits that will remain for the next 175 years or more at St. Bartholomew’s. Contact Carrie Hoff at 443-974-1738 or carriehoff@outlook.com for more information.

CELEBRATING 175 YEARS During our worship service on January 13th, we looked back to what a service here may have looked like during the time frame 1844 – 1884. At the beginning of the service Sarah Myers, our historian, made the following remarks:

It's with great joy that today we get to remember and celebrate the history of St. Bartholomew's church. One hundred and seventy five years ago, church services here would have been held in German and this tradition continued through the early twentieth century. The church, its congregation, and the local area have undergone many changes during this time, but a few core qualities remain the same. We are a group dedicated to serving God and our community, near and far. We honor the past and reach towards a vibrant future. This historical service represents the earliest years of this church's history, 1844 to 1884.

Let's imagine the what life was like in 1844. In 1844, the nation was still young; it was only 68 years after the Declaration of Independence. John Tyler was the 10th president of the United States. York County, Pennsylvania had 47,000 residents in 1840 as compared to the 446,000 residents of today. The area was very rural and settled by many German-speaking immigrants who came to Pennsylvania as farmers. Whether Lutheran or Reformed, religion was a critical part of their culture and it was not unusual for these believers to share church buildings.

In May 1844, Frederick and Elizabeth Bachman deeded representatives of the Lutheran and German Reformed congregations, Jacob Utz and John Miller, about one acre of land. A church was constructed with a union church being dedicated on Sunday, August 25, 1844. There are no photos of this first church, but it was described as being built of logs and weather-board with seating on three sides and an elevated pulpit on the fourth. The choir sat opposite the pulpit. In the earliest records available, communion happened twice a year, in spring and fall. In 1845, the Lutheran congregation had 50 individuals take communion and in 1849, the German Reformed congregation had 29 people take communion. Traveling ministers were shared amongst several congregations, taking turns visiting and providing inspired sermons on an reoccurring basis.

The first church burnt to the ground on the afternoon of Monday, July 14, 1879 when nearby Geating's Mill caught fire during the oats harvest and wind carried embers 200 yards to the roof of the church. Led by Henry Haas, a new, two story church of brick was constructed over the next two years. On Thursday, May 26, 1881 a new church was dedicated. The cost was $3,625.16 and required the use of 67,150 bricks. This church sat about 75 feet from today's front door in the parking area and the doors faced east toward the cemetery. The main floor was used for services and the lower level was used for Sunday School and Christian Endeavor. The sanctuary seating was divided into four sections, women with children, men, young women, and young men. We recreate that separation today for this service. By the 1880s, the Lutheran congregation had about 125 members, while the Reformed had about 75 members. A bell tower was later added in 1890.

The members of this early church were thinking of us all those years ago. When they rebuilt the church after the fire, they created a time capsule in their new church's corner stone which included a Bible, a Lutheran and Reformed Catechism, and Lutheran Church newspaper and a German reformed newspaper. These items were transferred to this church's corner stone when this church was constructed in 1935 leaving a lasting remembrance of those who came before. Those items and their memories are a part of us today. Today we remember a dedicated group of neighbors came together all those years ago to worship, give thanks, and praise. Today, we do the same.
